1. Why Guildford is a good place to launch this

Not flattery — these are the things that actually change the plan.

The work is high-value domestic. Guildford, Godalming, Farnham and the villages between them are expensive housing stock: period property, conservation areas, and a large slice of the Surrey Hills National Landscape where planning is tight. That produces extensions, loft conversions, basements, barn conversions and full refurbishments rather than volume newbuild. Firms doing that work are the 5–15 person outfits Klyara is built for, and they invoice enough to be caught by MTD.

High-value domestic work means end users. Which means the VAT reverse charge question comes up constantly and is answered wrongly constantly — a domestic client is an end user, the reverse charge does not apply, and firms who work on both domestic and main-contractor jobs get this wrong in both directions. That is a genuinely differentiating conversation to be able to have on a first call.

Retentions bite hard here. The commercial work in Guildford town, the university, the hospital and the industrial estates runs on applications, certificates and retention. Your retention content will land harder in Surrey than almost anywhere.

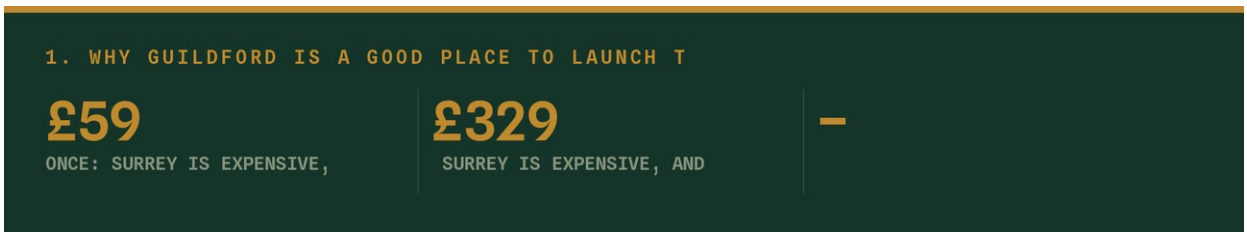

There is real competition, and it isn't specialist. Guildford has plenty of accountants. It has very few construction-only bookkeepers. "We only do building firms" is a genuinely unusual claim in this market, which is exactly why it works.

Slyfield is the trade centre of gravity. Selco is on Slyfield Industrial Estate, and Slyfield is where the vans go. That concentrates your entire offline campaign into a couple of square miles.

One caution, stated once: Surrey is expensive, and £59–£329/month is going to read as cheap rather than as a bargain to some of this market. Do not apologise for the price or discount it. The value story is the specialism, not the saving.

2. The service area — use this exact list everywhere

Primary (inside 10 miles, name these on the page and in GBP):

Guildford · Woking · Godalming · Farnham · Cranleigh · Ash · Normandy · Worplesdon
Merrow · Burpham · Shalford · Bramley · Wonersh · Chilworth · Send · Ripley

Secondary (10–20 miles, name in the ads and the town pages):

Camberley · Farnborough · Aldershot · Haslemere · Dorking · Leatherhead · Bookham
Effingham · Horsley · Byfleet · West Byfleet · Chertsey · Addlestone · Weybridge

Do not claim "London and the South East" or "nationwide". A construction bookkeeper who covers everywhere covers nowhere, and Google's local algorithm punishes over-broad service areas.

Postcodes: GU1–GU12, GU21–GU24, plus KT21–KT24 for the Leatherhead/Bookham edge.

[H2] Your accountant has a few building clients. We only have building clients.

Most Guildford accountants are perfectly good accountants. They also have a dentist, two letting agents, a marketing consultancy and you. CIS is the awkward bit at the end of their month.

Here it's the whole job. Gross payment status, 20% and 30% deductions, subcontractor verification, materials splits, retentions, the domestic reverse charge and the monthly 19th — that's the everyday work, not the exception.

That difference shows up in specific places:

• You get asked for your subbies' UTRs before the job starts, not in February
• Your retentions go on a list with release dates, and someone asks on the day
• Your reverse charge gets coded right the first time, because we knew to ask whether your customer was an end user
• Your CIS returns are filed by the 19th whether or not you were three men down that week

_____________________________________________

[H2] The reverse charge question Surrey firms get wrong both ways.

A lot of Guildford work is high-value domestic — extensions, lofts, basements, full refurbishments on period property. A homeowner is an end user, so the reverse charge does not apply and you charge VAT as normal.

Then the same firm picks up a job for a main contractor who'll invoice the work onward. That one is reverse charged, and no VAT should be on the invoice.

Firms that do both — which in this area is most of them — get it wrong in both directions, and only find out at the VAT return. It's twenty minutes to fix and it's the first thing we look at.

[TOOL CTA] Free VAT reverse charge checker →

[H2] Making Tax Digital has already caught more Surrey subbies than they realise.

MTD for Income Tax started in April 2026 for anyone with qualifying income over £50,000. It drops to £30,000 in April 2027 and £20,000 in April 2028.

Qualifying income is measured GROSS — before expenses and before CIS deductions. Invoice £55,000, lose £11,000 to CIS, bank £44,000, and HMRC still counts the £55,000.

Day rates in Surrey being what they are, a full-time subcontractor around here clears the £30,000 gross line without trying. Most of the trade is in the April 2027 wave and doesn't know it yet.

Subject: Monthly bookkeeping for your Guildford construction clients

Hi [NAME],

Quick one, and it's a partnership question rather than a pitch.

I do monthly bookkeeping, CIS and MTD filing for building firms across Guildford and Surrey.
That's all I do — no year-end accounts, no corporation tax, no self assessment. I deliberately stop where you start.

If you've got building clients whose monthly bookkeeping is more trouble than it's worth — the CIS returns, the reverse charge coding on domestic versus main-contractor work, the receipts that arrive in February — I'd take them on and hand you clean books at year end.

Two-way referral, 10–15%, and I'd be glad to discuss a mutual continuity arrangement, which I gather we both need on file.

Worth twenty minutes? I'm in Guildford.

I've started something in Guildford.

Eleven years doing the books for building firms, and the thing I kept running into was this: almost every builder I met had an accountant, and almost none of them had someone who actually knew construction.

That sounds like a small distinction. It isn't.

Here's what it looks like in practice, and these are all real conversations from the last month:

A firm in Godalming charging VAT on work for a main contractor who'd invoice it onward. That should have been reverse charged. Two years of it.

A subbie near Cranleigh who'd never applied for gross payment status, was comfortably passing all three tests, and had roughly twenty-four grand sitting with HMRC that could have been in his account.

A roofing firm in Guildford with £11,000 of retentions on jobs that finished in 2024. Defects period long over. Nobody had ever asked for it back, because nobody had the list.

None of that is exotic. It's just what happens when construction is the awkward ten per cent of someone's client book rather than the whole thing.

So — Klyara. Bookkeeping, CIS, VAT reverse charge, payroll and the new MTD quarterly filing, for building firms across Guildford, Woking, Godalming and Farnham. Fixed monthly fee. You run the jobs, we run the rest.

Over the next month I'm going to post everything I know about CIS, the reverse charge and MTD. Free, no gate, no email capture. If it's useful, follow along.

And if you're a Surrey builder wondering whether MTD has caught you — message me. Two minutes, I'll tell you straight, and there's no pitch on the end of it.

G3 — The reverse charge post, localised (this is the one that will get replies)

A Surrey-specific problem that costs building firms real money.

Round here most firms run two kinds of work at once: high-value domestic — extensions, lofts, basements, refurbs on period property — and jobs for main contractors.

Those two are treated completely differently for VAT, and firms get them wrong in both directions.

DOMESTIC CLIENT
A homeowner is an end user. The reverse charge does NOT apply. You charge VAT as normal.

MAIN CONTRACTOR WHO'LL INVOICE YOUR WORK ONWARD
Not an end user. The reverse charge DOES apply. No VAT on the invoice.

Get the first one wrong and you've not charged VAT you should have — and you'll owe it to HMRC out of your own pocket unless you can go back and charge it.

Get the second one wrong and you've collected VAT that isn't yours, which you'll be handing over anyway, having overcharged a customer you'd like to work for again.

The bit almost nobody does: the customer has to tell you in writing that they're an end user. It's their declaration, not your guess. Get it in an email at the start of the job and keep it.

Guildford and Surrey builders — a free thing, no catch, and I'm not selling anything in this post.

I do the books for building firms and I've put twelve calculators on our site. No email wall, no signup, no "enter your details to see your result." They just work.

The ones people actually use:
• CIS deduction — 20% or 30%, both directions, with the materials split taken out properly
• VAT reverse charge — whether it applies to this job, and what goes on the invoice
• Job margin — put price, costs and days in, get your real day rate out
• Retention tracker — the one that finds people money

klyara.com/tools.html

For context so I'm not being sneaky about it: this is my day job, and yes I'd like your business eventually. But the tools are free whether you ever ring me or not, and I'd rather be the bloke who gave you a working calculator than the bloke who gated it.

Any CIS or VAT question, stick it in the comments and I'll answer it properly.

G7 — The merchant-round post (after you've done the Slyfield lap — real, local, human)

Spent the morning at Slyfield.

If you're a Guildford builder you'll know it — Selco, the merchants, half the vans in the borough by nine o'clock.

Left some cards on a few trade counters, which is the boring bit. The useful bit was asking the counter managers which local firms are busy at the moment. They know, because they see the account volumes, and they were happy to talk about it.

General mood, for what it's worth: domestic extensions steady, commercial slower, everyone grumbling about how long they're waiting to get paid.

That last one's fixable, and it's mostly not about chasing harder. It's four boring things:
invoice the day the work's done, invoice a named person rather than "accounts", ask the payment run date in week one rather than week nine, and chase on a schedule instead of when you remember.

If you want the retention tracker we use — the one that finds people four to fifteen grand they'd written off — it's free on the site. klyara.com/tools.html

Local posting notes

- Post the local content to LinkedIn, Facebook and GBP. Skip X and TikTok for local — the audience there isn't geographically targeted and the local angle wastes the slot.
- Tag the town, not the county, in the first line. "Guildford" outperforms "Surrey" for local discovery; "Surrey" is better for the wider posts.
- Never use a location hashtag as the only local signal — put the town in the body text where Google can read it.

- The merchant post is the highest-performing local format in this sector, because it's the only one that proves you actually left the office.
